LYNDA RICHARDSON

We are delighted to acknowledge Lynda Richardson, art director of Virginia Wildlife magazine, and award-winning wildlife photographer, who conceived of Day of Photography and has coordinated the program all six years. Lynda is moderating the Meet the Instructors morning segment.

Lynda Richardson is a Virginia based wildlife and environmental photojournalist, known for the “beyond the call of duty” effort she puts into each of her assignments. Her ability to capture subjects from unique perspectives and with unusual techniques has earned her a global reputation. She was included as one of the top female outdoor photographers in

Nature’s Best magazine and a ‘woman photographer of note’ in Outdoor Photographer magazine.

Lynda’s entertaining photography workshops and lectures have been given to prestigious groups including the Explorer’s Club in New York. She is a regular fixture at Lewis Ginter Botanical Garden teaching a wide variety of informative and fun-filled photography workshops. ### ANTHONY RUMLEY

Anthony Rumley, M. Photog. CR., FP, CPP is an international-award-winning master photographer and the owner of Anthony Rumley Portrait and Fine Art Photography. For over 25 years Anthony has dedicated himself to his craft through ongoing education, competition, sharing his knowledge with others and generously donating his time and skill to numerous local charities. When not photographing or teaching, Anthony can usually be found on an outdoor adventure with his best friends (and, incidentally, children) Ashton and Alexandra. ### BOB SCHAMERHORN

Bob Schamerhorn has had a passion for birds, bugs, botany and art since childhood. His first photography experience was shooting with an antique dentist’s film camera, macro style, around the age of twelve. He had a darkroom in his parent’s basement throughout his youth. After high school, he studied Art and Design at Virginia Tech and has worked in art related fields ever since. Photography is an extension of the skills he uses in his vocation as a graphic artist for Infinity Graphics, a business which he started in 1996. The advancement in digital photography enticed his reconnection with nature and he began to improve his photography skills technically. Since then, he has been blessed with many opportunities to capture and share nature’s beauty. He is an award winning nature photographer who specializes in birds. His hope is to educate and to inspire the conservation of nature, by capturing and sharing its beauty with others. Visit his website at iphotobirds.com.

TOM VEAZEY

Tom Veazey is a Richmond native and graduate of the University of Richmond, who began his photographic journey over 30 years ago when he cashed in his college ring and purchased his first Nikon film camera. Tom’s first career - over 30 years in advertising, marketing, and education - exposed him to some of the best designers, artist, art directors, and photographers in the nation and nurtured his love and passion for great design, art, and photography.

For the past seven years Tom has worked with a number of regional and national sports photography groups and is a free-lance photographer for the Richmond Times-Dispatch. And – he enjoys photographing his three grandchildren whenever possible!

He teaches DSLR photography workshops at the University of Richmond, and has exhibited his work at the Gallery at UNOS, and at a featured exhibit at ART WORKS. Tom continues to donate his photography services to the World Pediatric Project, the Richmond Hospital Hospitality House, Richmond 2015, and UNOS. He has published two books of his photography.

ABOUT EAGLE PINES FALCONRY AND RAPTOR RESCUE

Eagle Pines Falconry and Raptor Rescue is located in Disputanta, Virginia, whose mission it is to enhance the welfare of raptors. All of the birds at Eagle Pines were injured and could not be released to the wild after rehabilitation. The U.S. Forest Service places the birds with Eagle Pines. They are trained to be comfortable with people and to act as representatives from the wild to promote respect and to inspire conservation

All programs, times, and speakers are subject to change.
